Not long ago my husband and I went to the memorial service for a friend. It took us 1 1/2 hours to get there. As I looked around I realized that I knew most people in the church. They had come from all over the Greater Los Angeles area to pay their respects. And then it dawned on me why this was so. Most of us are first generation immigrants and therefore have a very small circle of relatives here in the US. For this reason we all feel that our friends are our family. We care very much about each other and are there to share joys and sorrows. It used to be that we all met at weddings. Now that we get older we see each other at funerals and memorial services. Still, it is heart warming to know that you can count on your friends. But that’s what friends are for!

On another note: Most Swiss clubs are in desperate need of new members and I am sure there would be one that suits you to a T. Be it shooting, singing or just socializing, you will find one to your liking. It’s the easiest way to make friends. And to your surprise you also might find out that the members are not all “Heimweh-Schweizer” but people just like you! The nearest Consulate will gladly furnish you with a contact address. You can also download the information. Go to: www.eda.admin.ch/, click on “Representations” and then the name of your consulate. On the right hand side you will find links to Swiss Club lists. I can assure you that you will never regret your decision.

The Rabbi and the CEO
By Dr. Thomas D. Zweifel

Every day we hear yet another story of economic meltdown. Once-stalwart financial institutions are going out of business. Our leaders are struggling to come up with a recipe. It’s a dark time indeed.

For Thomas Zweifel, the solution comes from an unexpected source: the 3,000-year-old tradition of Judaism, which is not only a religion but also a time-honored system for ethical decision-making. Torah, Talmud and Kabbalah offer astonishingly practical lessons for twenty-first-century managers.

In a unique synergy, the author has teamed up with Rabbi Aaron L. Raskin, to blend the timeless wisdom of the Ten Commandments with a cutting-edge methodology based on 25 years of coaching leaders. The book is available at www.amazon.com and www.barnesandnoble.com. The cover price is $16.95.

The Solution for the Crisis: A New Leadership Framework

As U.S. President Barack Obama begins his term as the world’s most powerful leader, he faces a world in crisis, from terrorism and war to the threat of a global economic meltdown.

How do we get out of this mess? Bailouts and crisis management are not enough. We need to get to the root cause of the crisis, the lynchpin issue that underlies all the others. And the root cause is the lack of twenty-first century leadership—leadership that can meet the unprecedented challenges of our time. Of times like these the late economist and philosopher Kenneth Boulding once said, “The greatest need for leadership is in the dark. It is when the system is changing so rapidly … that old prescriptions and old wisdoms can only lead to catastrophe and leadership is necessary to call people to the very strangeness of the new world being born.”

The old leadership model is bankrupt. Why? Because a new leadership landscape—globalization and democratization, flattening organizational hierarchies and virtual teams, outsourcing and offshoring, the Internet and ubiquitous media makes leading a more complex challenge than ever.

Even the twentieth century’s greatest leaders might have had a hard time leading in the twenty-first. President Franklin D. Roosevelt’s debilitating polio would be all over the Internet, had he ever become chief executive. John F. Kennedy’s chronic affairs would haunt him while he faced not one but multiple enemies. And Winston Churchill would be on YouTube for his “battle with the bottle.”

Churchill was famous for saying that the higher you rise, the more clearly you see the big picture of vision and strategy. (He also said, presciently, that the higher the ape climbs, the more you can see of his bottom.)

But is that still true today, when the receptionist or the front-line salesperson interface with customers every day and may have as much insight into the market as top managers and board members? Even the military recognizes that soldiers on the ground in Sadr City or Seoul have more access to local strategic intelligence than commanders at headquarters and need to take part in strategic decision-making. In complex environments, top-down leadership no longer works.

The good news is that leadership is no longer confined to the realm of the select few. Throughout history, leadership was scarce. Now it is a public good. Google and Wikipedia put know-ledge at people’s fingertips with the click of a mouse. Skype and Facebook connect them across the world for free or next to nothing.

In the last century, consumers chose among a few TV channels and magazines; by 2007 there were 70 million blogs on the World Wide Web. MySpace and YouTube, where 65,000 videos are posted daily, democratize entertainment and give anyone a shot at being a musician or movie director. Thanks to Macs and Web 2.0, you too can be an industrial designer in the new “design democracy.”

So-called “lead users” are often on the forefront of innovation and product development, from software to high-performance windsurfing equipment. Patients have stopped blindly trusting their doctors and instead demand answers and choices—something unthinkable a generation ago, when doctors were thought to be omniscient demi-gods whose judgment no-one dared question.

But how are we to lead in this new environment? It is a tough question. We need a new framework of leadership, a phoenix to rise out of the ashes of the old.

What would such a framework look like in practice? Take a cue from Warren Buffett, the chairman of Berkshire Hathaway, one financial services company to emerge from the crisis unscathed. He announced plans to hire a younger person (or several) to understudy him in managing Berkshire’s investments, he did not mention financial savvy or technical skills or even strategic thinking. Qualified candidates, Buffett noted, must possess “independent thinking, emotional stability, and a keen understanding of both human and institutional behavior.”

I call it “The 3 Cs”: Co-leadership (not imposing solutions unilaterally, but empowering leaders at all levels to own the strategy and make decisions); Communication (not only broadcasting down the hierarchy, but listening up to get vital information from the market and the field into the boardroom); and Cross-cultural savvy (working with people of other value-systems, standing in their shoes and seeing the world from their point of view to foresee strategic moves by adversaries and competitors).

As Herb Kelleher, the former leader of Southwest Airlines, one of few airlines that have remained consistently profitable, put it recently, “a humanistic approach to business can pay dividends – and believe me, I’m not off my meds!”

If more leaders had followed Buffett’s and Kelleher’s (or Obama’s) example, they would not be in the predicament they are in. Neither would we.

Change of guard at the Consulate General in Atlanta
In February, after 3 years and 3 months being posted in Atlanta, my wife and I will be off to new horizons. Once the agreement from the Indian authorities has been obtained, Switzerland is planning to open a new Consulate General and Swissnex Office in Bangalore India. Again pending the agreement of the Indian authorities, I am expected to be in charge of this new Consulate General and we hope to travel to India the end of February. As Bangalore is the Silicon Valley of India, Switzerland has decided to increase its presence in this area, not only for consular matters but foremost to promote Swiss in the fields of higher education, science and technology, as well as a travel destination. After more than 8 combined years in Atlanta and the Southeast, it will not be easy for us to say goodbye to all the many friends and to this comfortable American life. On the other hand we are truly looking forward to discover a new subcontinent, its culture and people.
Our successors will be Claudio Leoncavallo and his wife Monique. Their arrival from Abidjan, Ivory Coast, is planned for the end of February 2009. Best wishes for an interesting and enjoyable stay in Atlanta go to Claudio and Monique.

Change of Swiss Honorary Consul in New Orleans
After 23 years of excellent services rendered, our Honorary Consul in New Orleans, Mr. John Geiser, had to retire due to reaching the age limit for serving in this position. The Swiss community in New Orleans as well as the Swiss Consulate General in Atlanta will miss his expertise and excellent contacts. Thank you so much John, also in the name of the staff of this Consulate General for your valuable assistance during all these years and best wishes for the future.
Federal Councillor Micheline Calmy-Rey has appointed Ms. Alexandra Mora as new Honorary Consul in New Orleans. She is a well introduced attorney in this city and took up her function as Swiss Honorary Consul beginning of October 2008. Ms. Mora is eager to get to know all of the Swiss community and is looking forward to be of assistance when needed. I wish her all the best in her new activity as Swiss Honorary Consul in New Orleans.

Implosion
Peter Koenig

The Swiss author hails from Menziken, in the Canton of Aargau. While on assignment, he worked in most countries described in the book. His novel is based on facts. A contemporary and bleak view of the whole world by a skeptic who weaves his experiences of 30+ years working for the World Bank around the world as an economist and a water resources specialist into a very moving and sometimes scaring novel. Whoever had at one time or another the feeling of being lied to by his Government or an International Organization, will find this riveting economic thriller an eye opener. Although written in 2007, this novel is just as timely and very up to date. Implosion can be bought online from Amazon.com, iUniverse.com, BN.com and most online booksellers or ordered from any bookshop under the ISBN Number 978-0-595-45349-8.

This is a New Winter Holiday Story! It’s a joy for children to read, and a chuckle for adults as they say out loud “Hee-Haw.” Sure to teach geography with this true story as it happened in Switzerland. In timeless history, to repeat during holiday time, at home or on vacation. During this tale of love and politics, best of all there is no violence here. Or enjoy dialect and language differences for a holiday play Hee-Haw. Read this story over and over to a child for the love of a favorite donkey! Please say hallo to Isidor... “Hee-Haw.” The book can be downloaded for free at: www.isidorpublishing.com

The Swiss community in the Boston area is thriving because of numerous Swiss associations and their members. Among the many Swiss groups, five are briefly presented in this article.

SwissLinkBoston, founded in September 2006, is a networking platform of over 150 Swiss students, researchers and young professionals with diverse backgrounds. Our activities include monthly gatherings at pubs and restaurants in Boston or Cambridge to exchange study and professional experience, Jass nights, and bigger events such as a yearly August 1st BBQ. Anybody related to or with interest in Switzerland can join our mailing list. Visit www.swisslinkboston.com or email us at swisslinkboston@gmail.com.

At the annual Raclette hosted by the Swiss Society of Boston, Emil Wyss from Swissnex Boston (Deputy Director, Consul) is waiting in line, smiling.

SwissLinkBoston gathering: German (Stefanie, TG), Italian (Evanne, TI), Romansh (Peder, GR) and French (Philippe, FR)

Swissnex Boston
Consulate of Switzerland, acts as a physical and virtual environment fostering closer ties between Switzerland, New England and Eastern Canada in academia, industry and society. It places particular emphasis on the next generation of creative thinkers and leaders, through a network that promotes the exchange of knowledge and generates cooperation in an innovative, inspiring, and rewarding atmosphere. Learn about the activities (especially on the blog) and sign up to be on the mailing list at www.swissnexboston.org.

Founded in 1865, the Swiss Benevolent Society is a charitable and non-profit organization, mostly a social club with fun activities for almost 400 members: many Swiss living in and around Boston, Swiss-Americans and anybody interested in Switzerland. Information flows with the “Chuchi-chäschtli”, an active email list and www.swissboston.org. The most famous attraction is the 1. August celebration at the “Boston Rüti” with the Warren Family in Harvard, MA (for 47 years!). Other activities include the formal Annual Meeting in March, playing Jass, hikes, Raclette and Samiclaus.

Friends of Switzerland Inc. (FOSI) is a non-profit corporation dedicated to the friendship among people who wish to express their interest in and admiration for Switzerland. FOSI holds monthly Stammtisch luncheons usually on the second Thursday of the months between October and May at the Harvard Club of Boston. Members receive a monthly letter advising them of the upcoming luncheons and speakers. FOSI furthers Swiss-American cultural relations through its Julius Adams Stratton Prizes and Fellowships. Parties interested (everybody welcome) in becoming a member contact Marc Redlich, Esq. at 617-720-0900 Ext. 21 or mredlich@redlichlaw.net.

The Swiss American Chamber of Commerce is a 2,500 member not for profit organization committed to the promotion and facilitation of business relations between the United States of America and Switzerland. The newly formed Boston Chapter wants to play a vital and active role in assisting Swiss companies in New England and U.S. Companies in Switzerland to expand their business in providing a networking platform to business executives, entrepreneurs, academia and young talents.

Massachusetts Swimming “Swiss Style” Comes to the Charles River

In a country like Switzerland, where rivers define major cities such as Zurich and Basel it seems natural that urban river swimming has become an important part of a wonderful and active outdoor culture. Some swimmers dive right in off the riverbanks, but Swiss urban swimming is also supported by a long tradition of bathhouse structures offering convenient ways for residents and tourists to enjoy a swim at any time of the day, even in winter. More than just swimming, each of these structures offers its own distinct architectural and cultural twist: some bathhouses have saunas and show films, others offer meals and evening activities. Zurich’s Frauenbad on the Stadthausquai has its own library, hosts concerts, and in the evenings opens up the “Barfussbar”, a popular spot with one rule: you must go barefoot. The Oberer Letten, located on Zurich’s Limmat River, was once home to an infamous drug scene but is now a trendy area in Switzerland’s largest city. Despite their differences, all of the bathhouses offer one thing in common: the chance to swim in a beautiful river in the heart of a city. In the middle of the twentieth century water quality issues led to swimming bans in many Swiss rivers, and the current resurgence of this urban freshwater swim culture is a testament to the success of a strong commitment to environmental efforts. This all may seem like a fairy tale to most Americans. Here in the States, urban rivers are still considered unsuitable for swimming, but the Charles River flowing between Boston and Cambridge is hoping to emulate the Swiss in becoming the first major urban river where public swimming can bring similar pleasures to its citizens.

In 2008, SwissNex Boston, Consulate of Switzerland partnered with the Charles River Conservancy to unveil “Think Swim, Think Swiss: Bringing Swiss-Style swimming to the Charles River”, an exhibit aimed at providing inspiration to accelerate the efforts of bringing back public swimming. “Think Swiss”, a US-wide initiative showcasing Switzerland as a knowledge-based country full of talent and creativity provided transferrable experience from specialty car plates to water quality awareness. The exhibit, which will also travel to Chicago and Washington, D.C., involves using three dimensional “Swiss Cross” viewers that superimpose images of Swiss bathhouses onto the banks of the Charles River next to the Harvard and M.I.T. campuses. Until recently rowers who fell into the Charles River were rushed to the nearest hospital for a tetanus shot. Hundreds of millions of dollars have been spent, legislation has been passed, and tireless work by local, state and federal agencies, has gone into cleaning the river. The hard work has paid off, as since 2005 the Charles River has been deemed safe for swimming except after heavy rain storms. Despite this great accomplishment, there are still no sanctioned places for public swimming along the river, but in 2007 and again in 2008 the river saw swimmers return to the water for a one mile swim race. “Swim races have been taking place right in the middle of Swiss cities for ages and it’s gotten to the point that swimming is embedded in urban Swiss culture,” said Swiss Consul Pascal Marmier, one of the 100 participants. “Being out on the Charles, swimming in a river enclosed by two great cities, helped to reaffirm my thoughts on the river’s potential for all of the citizens of these towns. I hope that in a few years urban swimming is similarly embedded in the hearts of the citizens of Boston.”

In the heart of the city’s bustle, citizens of Geneva enjoy taking time off to swim at the Bains des Pâquis, where a restaurant and health spa keep this swim facility busy year-round. (photo copyright: Geneva Tourism)

Dionysus’ Gift with Swiss Flair...

“I consider the Art of Wine a Lifestyle” – When Thomas Vogele from Seattle speaks of wine, you listen. Second generation Swiss, Thomas graduated from the University of Washington in Seattle. His degree in Liberal Arts left him wondering how he could utilize his educational achievement lucratively. The family suggested that he should sell “something”. Thomas followed their advice and ended up at the Gallo winery. Following Gallo he worked for Sutter Home, Robert Mondavi, and now Folio Fine Wine Partners. His clients responded enthusiastically to the young salesman’s talent. When he realized how popular his new field of work made him, Thomas was sold.

Thomas’ wife Kristin and his Swiss-born parents Yvonne and Bruno Vögele soon suggested for Thomas to pioneer off into a family business under his own precious concoction in restaurants and specialty stores or you may go online directly. Thomas affectionately explains that the Zero refers to all starts where there is “nothing”. Mother Nature and earth start from scratch creating a treasure seemingly from “nothing”. The One, so Thomas explains, is the start of everything and symbolically embraces the archetype of “every good start”.

The Vogeles presently produce two Washington wines under the Zero One label: a Riesling they call “Golden Delicious” and a Cabernet they refer to as “Wild Sky”. The critiques call both wines superb as the price is moderate. Esteemed gourmands appreciate the delicate tastes. Are you a wine connoisseur? – Yes or maybe? - You might want to taste this gift of nature!

As this article is evolving, I receive an e-mail from Thomas Vogele: The Seattle Times has named the Zero One Golden Delicious among the best 100 wines. They write: “Quality is rarely an accident”. Out of 100 points, this wonderful wine scored in the 90s. The newspaper states that 5 of 6 wineries in this state never make this prestigious list. Thomas and Kristin Vogele: Congratulations for this praiseworthy achievement! What can you say! – Hard work with good, solid Swiss quality! Now, my good friends you have the pleasure of exploring on your own. Enjoy! Visit the website: www.zeroonevintners.com. Or contact Thomas Vogele directly at: Thomas@ZeroOneVintners.com
New York 125th Anniversary of the Swiss Gymnastic Society - 1884-2009

The Swiss Gymnastic Society will celebrate its 125th year of existence on Saturday, September 12, 2009 at the Chateau Thon, Warwick, NY.

We are proud to note, that the NYSGS is one of the oldest Swiss Clubs in New York. It all began in the spring of 1884, when some young Swiss in and around New York decided to join ranks to establish a Gymnastic Society with a Swiss character. The club was called “Schweizer Turn und Schwing Club”. Our archives have revealed names and stories of many Swiss Citizens, who came to the United States of America as emigrants. They were active participants in many “Turnvereins” in Switzerland and were eager to continue their favorite recreational activity in their newly adopted country.

Despite difficulties which surfaced from time to time, the club endured due to highly motivated and dedicated men and women who encouraged the membership to persevere. Browsing through neat handwritten records, one learns how hard they trained to perform. In 1891, the NYSGS was made an honorary member of the “Eidgenössische Turnverein”, the parent organization in Switzerland. The first real event for the young club took place from September 5 to 7, 1891, when all the Swiss in the New York Metropolitan area came together to celebrate the 600th anniversary of the Swiss Confederation. The Club participated actively at those patriotic festivities.

In the summer of 1893, a group of gymnasts took part at the “Eidgenössische Turnfest” in Lugano. Of course this was not a convenient trip like nowadays, but more like an expedition lasting a few months. We have attended these events numerous times, granted not always as active gymnasts. In fact in June 2007 we were represented at the Federal Show of Gymnastics in Frauenfeld by Werner Jäggl, our former instructor and honorary member.

At the beginning of the 20th century, the Schweizer Turnverein of New York was an active society, consisting of a male gymnastic section, one for boys and later also ladies. Camaraderie at social events played an important role, a fact that has not changed, even today. In the spring of 1946 our club decided to acquire a place where its members could escape from the steamy summers of New York. A piece of property was bought near Croton Falls, about 50 miles north of New York City. The much beloved camp near the shore of the Croton Falls Reservoir, surrounded by wooded hills, reminded many of the Swiss countryside. It was the perfect setting for spending a wonderful weekend with friends.

In 1939 and 1966, the New York Swiss Turnverein was honored to host the “Swiss American National Gymnastic Contest”. The latter one was also the last Turnfest held. In the early seventies we still had our weekly gymnastic lessons, but the membership did not get any younger, no active Swiss Gymnasts were coming to the United States which ultimately brought our gymnastic activities to an end.

Since then the club puts together an annual calendar of events which include a fondue, the General Meeting, a couple of Jass tournaments and a picnic. True to our gymnastic heritage, we continue to organize nature hikes in the nearby Hudson Highlands region. The year ends with a well attended traditional Christmas party.

Our program is intended to give all of us an opportunity to have a good time in a relaxed atmosphere and to reminisce, like our fellow Swiss did over one hundred years ago. To date, the Swiss Turnverein consists of more than 80 members who are ready and willing to carry the banner and the legacy of our society towards the existence of another 125 years.

If you live in the Greater New York Area and are interested in a challenging game of Jass or any of our other activities, please contact us by E-mail at pg125nysgs@hotmail.com

Seven Swiss Contemporary quilt Artists exhibit in Lowell, MA

Although Switzerland has a strong textile tradition, quilts were barely known till the seventies. The Swiss sleep under duvets and the use of fabric scraps reminded people of poverty not creativity. That changed in the sixties. Many companies sent employees to the USA to work or study. There, they encountered quilts in exhibits, through friends, or in quilting groups. They brought technical knowledge and quilts back to Switzerland. Quilt Houston organized the first Swiss exhibit and showed quilts as art. Other exhibits followed to much acclaim. Still, patchwork suffered from prejudice and museums rarely showed this new textile art. To combat this attitude a group of quilters, who had met at the Neuchâtel exhibit, founded “fabric-connection.ch” in 2005.

In 1986, the “Club de Patchwork du Littoral Neuchâtelois” organized the first Swiss exhibit and showed quilts as art. Other exhibits followed to much acclaim. Still, patchwork suffered from prejudice and museums rarely showed this new textile art. To combat this attitude a group of quilters, who had met at the Neuchâtel exhibit, founded “fabric-connection.ch” in 2005.

The members Maryline Collioud Robert, Beatrice Lanter, Elisabeth Portmann, Ursula Kern, Ursula König, Katharina Della Chiesa and Sylvia Einstein (lives near Boston) have worked professionally for many years, each has developed her own style and has exhibited widely. They submitted a dossier, designed by a graphic artist, to about 11 galleries and museums. Only the gallery of the “Schule für Gestaltung” (School of Design) accepted the proposal leading to their first exhibit together, which took place in Basel in 2007. The gallery space highlighted the beauty of each work. The exhibit at the New England Quilt Museum in Lowell, MA lasts until April 18, 2009. The opening on January 31 was sponsored by Swissnex of Boston. For more information, go to: www.fabric-connection.ch or www.nequiltmuseum.org.

Swiss Club of Central Indiana

The Swiss Club of Central Indiana held their annual Christmas potluck dinner and Samichlaus gift giving for the smaller children at St. Thomas Moore Catholic Church in Mooresville, IN on December 14, 2008. An enjoyable time was had by all attendees and the Swiss style food and deserts were a big hit as usual.

Florida
Swiss America Club of SW Florida

On November 9, 2008, the Swiss American Club of SW Florida celebrated its tenth anniversary with a brunch on Useppa Island, a paradise in the Pine Island Sound north of Ft. Myers, accessible only by boat. After a one-hour trip on the M/V Lady Chadwick, 49 members and 2 guests walked the short distance from the dock to the Collier Inn. Brief remarks by Peter Moser, the first president of the organization, and Rosmarie Strother, the current president, were followed by a beautiful island BBQ. Of the original founding members of the club, twenty-three are still active and participate in the monthly get-togethers. Sixteen of them were present for the celebration. A group photo commemorates this milestone in one of America’s youngest Swiss clubs.

The traditional Chlaushock took place on St. Nicholas Day (December 6) at the President’s House in Naples. Members of the Board of Directors put up the tables and chairs and decorated them in red, white and green for the occasion. Fifty members and seven guests ventured into the “house in the woods” for socializing and a meal of hot “Fleischkäse” and potato salad, followed by Key Lime Pie. As always, a good time was had by all!

Think Swiss Climate Trail

Urs Ziswiler, Switzerland’s ambassador to the United States, delivered a talk on climate change at Rice Memorial Center on October 30th to conclude his government’s “Think Swiss Climate Trail,” a set of posters displayed on campus, first at the Brochstein Pavilion and then at the RMC. The exhibit is touring the nation to trumpet Switzerland’s standing as the most greenhouse gas-efficient economy in the world. After hurricane Ike roared through Houston in September, causing some $90,000,000 in damage, it was more than appropriate to have “The Climate Change Symposium” at Rice University. The Symposium was organized by Dr. Andre W. Droxler, Professor at the Department of Earth Science and Director of the Center for Studies of Environment and Society at Rice University. The meeting was well attended and very well received.

While Ambassador Ziswiler elaborated on the international perspective “From the Alps to the Rocky Mountains,” Dr. Droxler brought with him a discussion of past climactic history, as well as a guide to climate change for the next century. Both experts and discussions complemented each other nicely.

Fundraising Success Continues for Swiss Nationality Room

Pittsburgh -- The Swiss Nationality Room Committee is continuing to raise funds for the construction of a Swiss Nationality Room at the University of Pittsburgh’s Cathedral of Learning.

Members of the Swiss-American Society of Pittsburgh as well as many friends from across the United States and Switzerland have provided generous support for the project. Recently, the US$150,000 fundraising threshold was reached, which represents 60 percent of our US$250,000 goal.

During the Swiss-American Society of Pittsburgh’s annual August 1st celebration, an exciting new gift opportunity was unveiled. For a charitable gift of $500, individuals can be a sponsor of one of the classroom’s five student tables, which represent Switzerland’s German, French, Italian, and Romansch linguistic regions as well as Swiss Abroad.

There is a longstanding tradition of cultural groups in western Pennsylvania raising funds for the construction of Nationality Rooms at the Cathedral of Learning. Swiss architect Justin Rüssli, who also designed the Swiss Ambassador’s residence in Washington, D.C., was commissioned to create architectural drawings for the planned Swiss Nationality Room. The room design features a classroom of the 16th-century Zurich area furnished with trestle tables, “Stabellen” chairs from that period, and a traditional Swiss Kachelofen (ceramic tiled oven).

Construction of the room will begin once fundraising has been completed. The Swiss Room will be maintained in perpetuity by the University of Pittsburgh as a star in its constellation of internationally known Nationality Rooms.

For more information about the Swiss Nationality Room project, please contact Fred Carlson at fred@carlsonstudio.com or 412-856-0982.

Looking for your roots?

Ursula Hegelbach lived from 2002 to 2005 in New York where her son Elias was born. The family moved back to Switzerland for two years and then came back in January 2008, this time to Chicago.

About 60 years ago, her father started a business in his own little studio. Painting family crests keeps the Swiss tradition alive and makes a lot of people happy since it is the symbol of each family roots. With a lot of dedication, he collected and kept every single crest he could find in his archive. Almost 20 years ago, Ursula took over the family business from her father. She now has access to thousands of Swiss crests.

For the last 50 years, the family has attended successfully the OLMA Fair in St. Gallen, where they get orders for different occasions such as marriage, birthdays or to honor somebody. Every crest is handpainted on different shapes of maple wood, parchment paper or calf leather.

Film Review

Locarno Golden Leopard Award Winner “Fraulein”

Film drama about the intersecting lives of three Émigrés from the former Yugoslavia Fraulein is a film by Swiss-Bosnian director Andrea Staka and has a running time of 81 min.

Ruza left Belgrade more than 25 years ago to seek a new life in Zurich. Now in her fifties, she has completely detached herself from the past. She owns a cafeteria and maintains an orderly, joyless existence. Mila, a waitress there, is a good-humored Croatian woman who also emigrated decades ago, but, unlike Ruza, she dreams of returning to a house on the Croatian coast.

Both of them receive a jolt when Ana, a young, itinerant woman who has fled Sarajevo, breezes into the cafeteria looking for work. Ruza hires her but is annoyed by Ana’s impulsive and spirited efforts to inject life into the cafeteria. Gradually the acrimony will dissipate, as Ana, who hides a tragic secret under her passionate spirit, begins to thaw Ruza’s chill, and their relationship will change both women in ways they never anticipated.

The DVDs are available at Film Movement (www.filmmovement.com) and through major retailers such as Blockbuster, Amazon, Netflix and at Passion River Films (www.passionriver.com).
